What I Learned on the Salt This Year

2013
Everyone gets ready for launch in different ways
Some wonder if it will all fit in the boat
Some put on their man skirts and start packing.
Others take an axe to their boat
I found out alot about SOARs
Properly loaded, you can keep four beers in reach.
The floor baffles won't blow if you keep the boat in the water when its upside down.
They will take a pretty good bend around a rock
But they won't...
...knock a large boulder out of your way
There are some great campsites
Pete's Pond is nice if you can get someone to drag your boat through the mud for you.
Hess Canyon is nice and sunny
But a bad place to get overhydrated
And then there is Cherry Creek
But only a few can do the Cherry Creek river dance
There is gold in those waters
I learned that not all Indian ruins are worth the hike
I found every photographer captures the beauty of the river differently.
Some take landscapes
Some take sunsets
Some take action shots
And some take self portraits
There were some memorable moments on the water.
The Professor's not leading us into Rat Trap blind is he?
Yes, that was Rat Trap.
It's a little deeper here than it looks.
Ranger Brian makes it look easy.
I've got Quartzite dialed in. Watch this.
Just because I flipped there last week doesn't mean I'll do it again this week
That looks like me last week
Just because I made it last week doesn't mean I'll make it this week.
After Corkscrew, life becomes more relaxed
You can still find an easy Mark for the old look up trick
And then comes the bridge
Journey's End
